RESTORATION WORKS

Our team are happy to visit each project, access the current stonework, and then discuss the most appropriate repair and restoration plan. We work to consider the sustainability and durability of the existing stonework, study the extent of the material decay, and preserve existing stonework where possible. Cregg Stone would be delighted to meet our clients to discuss your stone requirements and assist with designs and plans for a cost effective solution.

We have worked on many prestigious projects such as the restoration of St Mel's Cathedral to its former glory, repairs to existing stairs in the National Gallery of Ireland, restoration of Mullingar Court House which included the removal and reinstatement of the self-supported sandstone spiral staircase, arches and the cartouche. These are a few of the many restoration projects completed.

Primark, Belfast

St. Mels Cathedral, Longford was completely destroyed by fire in 2009

One of the outstanding features of the Cathedral is the double line of twenty eight magnificent limestone columns either side of the central aisle. They suffered such massive damage during the fire in 2009 that retention or repair was totally out of the question. Cregg Stone Ltd. were engaged to replace the limestone columns which had, for over 150 years, supported the nave roof and the walls of St. Mel's Cathedral. The limestone was quarried in Old Leighlin in Co. Carlow. Each column weighs over 13 tonnes. Contract Value of €1,300,000.
